DEV2500 : Interface Programming

Interface Programming combines the concepts and techniques learned in previous courses to integrate design concepts with development. Students will learn what is involved in creating interactive applications that enable user interaction through a visual interface. Course work will task students to apply usability techniques to accommodate user needs while addressing the functional parameters of a given user interface.

Credits 4