

CTI3933 : Securing Systems and Data

In the Securing Systems and Data course, students will explore the differences between securing data and applications on one network and securing data across multiple networks. They will examine the challenges and professional workflows that each requires to successfully safeguard data from malicious sources, respond to threats, and recover from disasters. Students will be able to identify and assess risks and create a security plan for both cloud and intercloud security issues.

Credits 3