

CAP355 : Natural Language Processing

In the Natural Language Processing course, students will learn techniques and methods for designing and implementing natural language processing (NLP) applications. The curriculum spans usages including sentiment analysis, text classification, speech processing, and text generation. Students will explore and practice implementation of techniques such as tokenizing, stemming, and lemmatization in designing and creating an NLP application.

Credits 4

Course Length 4 weeks