COS560 : Data Science

The Data Science course examines the processes, algorithms, and tools used across the industry to extract knowledge from structured and unstructured data. The curriculum spans topics such as data preparation, statistical evaluation of data, and data representation. After building a strong knowledge base in data science, students will be able to evaluate from multiple methods and create their own solutions to break down large amounts of data into usable information.

Credits 3